12. Educational aims of the programme

English Literature can be taken as a Single Honours course or as Joint Honours with a range of other courses - for example Creative Writing, or English Language - so that you may tailor your degree to suit your particular interests and career ambitions. The course content covers fiction, poetry and drama spanning the past 500 years and including the present day, generated in England and in other countries around the world. It covers a variety of approaches to studying and thinking about literature focusing, especially, on the cultural and historical contexts of its publication.

The course aims are that students will:

- acquire and exercise skills of literary analysis and criticism through the study of sophisticated literary texts from a range of genres and period;

- explore and understand texts in context, especially contexts relating to cultural and social change;
- understand the relationship between literary theory and practice through a detailed study of theory and its application to selected texts;
- gain in intellectual and personal independence and thus increase self-confidence;
- develop both enjoyment of literature and appreciation of its personal, cultural and historical significance, through a nurturing of intellectual and imaginative capability;
- acquire an intellectual and practical basis for further study or training in English and/or related disciplines;
- develop a range of high-order conceptual, communication, research and information-based skills;
- be encouraged in the development of transferable skills and qualities which support students in graduate employment.

Learning outcomes and combined subject degrees (joint, major and minor pathways):

- Joint Pathway
Students following a joint pathway will have met the majority of the learning outcomes for both subjects, although the range of knowledge and discipline specific understanding in terms of options or specialisms will be more restricted than for a single or major Honours student. Although joint students need not take the independent research project, ENGL3301, they still have the opportunity to undertake shorter research exercises.
- Major Pathway
Students following a major pathway will have met the learning outcomes for the subject but will have focused their studies in relation to subject options or specialisms.
- Minor Pathway
Students following a minor pathway will have met some of the learning outcomes for the subject (as indicated by the modules studied), and will have focused the development of their knowledge, understanding and subject specific skills in particular aspects of the discipline. Although joint students cannot take the independent research project, ENGL3301, they still have the opportunity to undertake shorter research exercises.

Learning, teaching and assessment

Teaching

Students are taught through a combination of workshops, lectures, seminars, research trips to cultural locations in the region, and film screenings. Interactive workshops take a variety of formats and are intended to enable the application of learning through discussion and small group activities. Seminars enable the discussion and development of understanding of topics covered in lectures. All modules are supported by the use of the VLE and other learning technologies.

Students also have the opportunity to gain employability skills through work-based learning. The primary focus of this provision is the level 5 work project module ENGL2207 where students gain valuable experience of work. At level 4 students will have the opportunity to take up a short volunteering placement.

In addition, meetings with Personal Academic Tutors are scheduled on at least four occasions in the first year and three occasions in each of the other years of a course.

The University places emphasis on enabling students to develop the independent learning capabilities that will equip them for lifelong learning and future employment, as well as academic achievement. A mixture of independent study, teaching and academic support from Student Services and Library Services, and also the Personal Academic Tutoring system enables students to reflect on progress and build up a profile of skills, achievements and experiences that will help them to flourish and be successful.

Contact time

In a typical week, students will have around 12 contact hours of teaching. The precise amount of contact hours will depend on the optional modules selected; in the final year there is normally slightly less structured class teaching, and a greater emphasis on guided independent study.

Typically, class contact time will be structured around:

- 4 hours of lectures (e.g., film screenings)
- 8 hours of seminars (including workshops and other interactive formats)

Independent self-study

In addition to the contact time, students are expected to undertake around 24 hours of personal self-study per week. Typically, this will involve primary reading, research and critical reading, group work, directed study tasks.

Independent learning is supported by a range of excellent learning facilities, including the Hive and library resources, the virtual learning environment, and extensive electronic learning resources.

Teaching staff

Students are taught by a research-active academic team. All permanent staff members have doctorates, and all have HEA accreditation to at least Fellowship level. The course curriculum has been designed to reflect not only the QAA benchmark requirements and national consensus on the content of an English Literature degree, but also the established and emerging research specialism of the team. The core teaching team is supplemented on occasion by suitably expert Visiting Lecturers / guest speakers, and Associate Lecturers. Regular staff development activity in the School of Humanities and the wider University supports the academic team to maintain the currency of their teaching methods and styles, to remain fully engaged with national debates and policy on Inclusion, and to continue to innovate and diversify in both teaching and assessment.

Assessment

The course provides opportunities to test understanding and learning informally through the completion of practice or 'formative' assignments. In addition, all level 4 students will have at least one opportunity to submit a formative assignment by week 4 of semester 1. This will support their progress in the very early stages of their studies and provide vital feedback prior to the submission of the first assignment. Each module has one or more formal or 'summative' assessment which is graded and counts towards the overall module grade.

Students also have the opportunity to discuss informally their plan for a coursework assignment with the module tutor. In the case of the Independent Research Project, the supervising tutor will comment once on each chapter with regard to its content, structure and any presentational errors.

Assessment methods include: essay, essay or project plan, research exercise, critical exercise, close reading, personal response, contextual reading, blog, online discussion, poster, presentation (group and individual), analysis of form, portfolio, annotated bibliography, critical anthology, reflective piece, research project, comprehension exercise, rationale.

The precise assessment requirements for an individual student in an academic year will vary according to the mandatory and optional modules taken, but a typical formal summative assessment pattern for each year of the course is:

Year 1

- 3 Essays
- 1 Analysis of form
- 1 Critical exercise
- 1 Essay plan
- 1 Contextual reading
- 1 Group presentation
- 1 Personal response
- 1 Portfolio

Year 2

- 4 Essays
- 2 Blogs
- 1 Poster
- 1 Critical analysis
- 1 critical exercise
- 1 comprehension exercise
- 1 critical anthology

Year 3

- 1 independent research project
- 1 research portfolio
- 1 portfolio
- 1 research exercise
- 4 Essays
- 1 presentation
- 1 critical project
- 1 annotated anthology
- 1 close reading
- 1 critical reading

14. Assessment strategy

Assessments are carefully devised to provide students with the opportunity to acquire, practise and improve skills as these develop with shorter and more guided assessment at Level 4 running to longer, increasingly independent work at Level 6.

The QAA benchmark statement for English (2019) requires that Single Honours literature courses include 'knowledge of writing from periods before 1800 and the range of principal literary genres across prose, poetry and drama'. These requirements offer students the opportunity to pursue their individual interests in specific periods and genres.

There are formative and summative assignments for each module, with the former focusing on skill acquisition, the learning process, and scaffolding the graded work. Students also have a range of additional formative assessment opportunities at various points of their studies. All Level 4 students have the opportunity to submit work for formative assessment at a crucial early stage in the mandatory module ENGL1101. Summative work is typically assessed at two points in the optional modules and two/three in the mandatories, with the shorter assignment having a minimum 10% weighting. Advice about assignments is presented in the module outline at the commencement of each module and full direction is given within the context of teaching sessions where teaching and group tasks are specifically designed to provide formative opportunities to practise the skills, competencies, and understanding that will be demonstrated in the summative assessment tasks.

Assessments must be submitted via Turnitin on Blackboard. Tutorial feedback is given electronically with additional feedback, oral or annotated on the submitted work. On the return of work students are encouraged to discuss feedback with tutors. Work is returned to students within 20 working days of the assessment deadline. The detailed assessment policy is available to students in the subject handbook on the BA English Blackboard site.

The formal essay remains key to the assessment strategy in line with English Subject Benchmark and is incrementally extended in length and complexity from Level 4 to Level 6. Essay writing techniques and skills are developed primarily in the mandatory modules through subject specific formative tasks and summative assignments such as close reading, contextual queries, research exercises, planning, annotated bibliography, critical reviews, reflective practices. Alongside the essay, the programme offers a range of assessment formats that develop further critical and creative thinking and consolidate key transferable and employability skills. Especially in the optional modules, the alternative options to the essay format address: time management, communication, initiative, creativity, presentation, leadership, pair and group work, peer feedback, compiling a diary/journal/portfolio, and report writing. Independent project development is explored subject specifically and beyond at Level 6: students undertake an Independent Research Project as their mandatory module (30 credits) and have the option to take the Work Project module at Level 5, which offers direct experience of project development in the working environment.

Assessment across Level 4 will explore and scaffold reading and writing practices that are aware of the diversities and developments in English literature. Students will be assessed on their development in acquiring subject specific knowledge, skills, and competences. While assessment in the two 30 credit mandatory modules at level 4 will focus on textual close-reading and essay writing, the other mandatory and optional modules available at Level 4 will expand the students' analytical, critical, and reflective skills and practices through assessment forms that range from portfolios to personal responses and group presentations. Level 5 modules are designed to foster critical and theoretical approaches and develop critical thinking and independent learning. Assessment at level 5 is designed to develop these skills through a range of formats, such as critical anthologies and discussion blogs. Assessments methods at Level 6 are designed to offer students development of knowledge and opportunities for critical thinking and expression of ideas and, especially, extended independent research and writing in the mandatory project (30 credits).

All assessments are graded by subject-specific criteria which are available to students in all module outlines. These are supplemented by further guidance from staff, aiding students in understanding how these criteria relate to the Learning Outcomes and assessment rubric. Where appropriate, further criteria may be made available for students, for example for a presentation or poster format.

15. Programme structures and requirements

Please see the award map at Appendix 1.

16. QAA and professional academic standards and quality

The course reflects the Subject Benchmark statements for English (2019). These articulate the defining principles, nature, and scope of the subject as well as the knowledge, understanding and subject skills expected of successful honours graduates in this area. These have been used to craft module learning outcomes and their content, and the learning, teaching and assessment strategies of modules. An online copy is available at:

https://www.qaa.ac.uk/docs/qaa/subject-benchmark-statements/subject-benchmark-statement-english.pdf?sfvrsn=47e2cb81_4

The course reflects the subject benchmark statement for English as it applies to English Literature and the QAA Code of Practice on assessment, careers, and disability. It fosters wide and varied reading; enables students to develop independent critical thinking and judgement; engages students imaginatively in the process of reading and analysing complex and sophisticated literary and non-literary texts. The curriculum ensures a broad and balanced curriculum by application to a range of literary periods and genres as required by the subject benchmark. This includes knowledge of the dominant literary genres pre-1800, the principal genres of poetry, drama, and fiction, and global breadth of literature written in the English language. Students develop knowledge and appreciation of contextual approaches to the production and reception of literary texts, and this is underpinned by a compulsory theoretical module.

The course is intellectually stimulating and satisfying and encourages in students a sense of enthusiasm for the subject and an appreciation of its continuing social and cultural importance. The course gives emphasis to a range of subject-specific and transferable skills, including high order conceptual, analytic, and communication skills of value in graduate employment. In its intellectual character and academic practice, the course demonstrates a critical self-awareness that encourages sophisticated interrogation of its own history, status, and practices. It includes the study of the literatures from the Anglophone world, comparative literature, and film.

This award is located at Level 6 of the FHEQ.

17. Support for students

The English Literature Course Team is committed to ensuring that all students are given individual support throughout their time at the University of Worcester.

Students' transition into University life is assisted by an initial one-week Induction programme, which, through a range of activities introduces students to their course, the academic staff who will be teaching them, their Personal Academic Tutors (PATs), and the School of Humanities. All students are invited to attend a welcome party in Induction Week, as well as other informal 'ice-breaking' activities.

During this initial welcome week and in Progression Week students are involved in a range of activities which support them in developing an understanding of the expectations of their course, undergraduate study and the University's systems and services. They have talks or tours, for example, which introduce them to the Library and IT facilities, Media Services, the Careers and Counselling Services.

Students are also provided with a brief induction into their second and third year in the welcome back meetings

The School of Humanities monitors student engagement closely. This is done initially on the basis of module attendance which is administered by module leaders but is referred where appropriate to Course Leader and Head of School. The school also refer to non-submission data to identify and support students who may be struggling with engagement.

All students are allocated a Personal Academic Tutor (PAT) who will advise them on all aspects of their academic progress, personal welfare, study support, and career-planning, throughout their studies at the University. PAT sessions usually take one of two forms: either one-to-one sessions where notes are taken and stored on SOLE, or group-based sessions where general points and issues relating to the course are dealt with. Students are invited to meet their PAT twice per semester at level 4 and three time per year at levels 5 and 6. Group Sessions are timetabled in Progression Week.

First Year students will meet their PAT at the English Literary Induction Session in Welcome Week, when there will be an opportunity to arrange an initial tutorial. The PAT is an important source of support during a student's time at the University of Worcester. The PAT will be a member of your subject team (or one of your subject teams in the case of Joint Students) and will therefore be able to answer general questions about your course and about the way the scheme works (for instance, how to apply from Mitigating Circumstances). The PAT is also there to advise on ways you can improve skills. The PAT will listen to any personal difficulties and will be able to offer direction to appropriate sources of help from other UW facilities. The PAT is normally the person who will write a reference for any job applications made during and after your studies.

The focus of the PAT is to encourage your personal development planning to offer structured support to develop:

- Awareness of strengths and weaknesses
- A clear vision of what a student may want to achieve through HE study
- Greater understanding of how study in a discipline area at UW can help towards goals
- Responsibility for choices in modules, work and social life
- A reflective approach to all the feedback you received on work
- A sense and a record of progression and achievement in the development of subject and generic skills and attributes (qualities)
- An ability to use this greater awareness to articulate the benefits of HE experience to others including employers

The PAT will also:

- Respond to requests for support and help with problems which affect academic work either at subject level or by referral to other UW facilities
- Provide information for and assist in the drafting of UW references

Module tutors support students through one-to-one and small group tutorials and provide students with clear indications of when they will be available for consultation. When students cannot attend regularly advertised tutorial times or drop-in sessions, they can arrange appointments by email.

The Independent Research Project is supported by individual supervision from a member of the team. This is supplemented by taught sessions which in the initial stages support the first assignment. The later sessions focus on reinforcing research and writing skills through seminars and workshops.

Students are further supported through a range of online support, for example via email or skype tutorials. All modules are supported through the virtual learning environment (VLE) accessed through Blackboard. The Course Handbook is also available online.

The Course team liaises with a range of centrally provided support services to ensure that students access all appropriate channels of support, these include for example:

- The Disability and Dyslexia Service within Student Services specialist support on a one to one basis.
- Writing support from the Royal Literary Fund Writers in Residence.
- Writing support for international and EU students from the Language Centre.
- The Students' Union which as an independent charity, devoted to the educational interests and welfare of all students studying at the University it represents student views within the University.

20. Graduate destinations, employability and links with employers

Preparing students for employment

In Induction, in years 1 & 2 through the mandatory modules, and in year 3 through individual tutorials, students engage in specific activities in order to recognise the following generic skills which are developed through the curriculum (written communication, documenting ideas and information, creativity, analysis, tolerance of different points of view, critical thinking, teamwork, time management and organisation, IT skills for example as well as prior and contemporaneous life- long learning). This is structured and systematic. In several optional modules it is the practice for learning logs and journals to be part of the assessment strategy.

Many English Literature students are student ambassadors, and our students are strongly encouraged to take up opportunities provided both within and outside the University, for example, as Course Reps, research assistants, classroom reading assistants and to apply for the Worcester Award. The Student Union offers students a range of volunteering opportunities and there have been further opportunities open to English Literature students to work at local literary festivals.

There are also opportunities for students to apply for the Students as Academic Partners (SAP) Scheme, where they work with a member of the team on a project. A recent example of this includes a project developing a journal of student work.

Two Progression Weeks in each academic year, when the normal teaching timetable is suspended, provide the opportunity for dedicated academic tutoring sessions when students are able to discuss their career aspirations.

Graduate destinations

The BA English Literature course provides a basis for postgraduate study in literature or related disciplines, for careers in teaching and education at all levels, and for a range of professions in the field inclusively termed the cultural / creative industries.

Graduates in English Literature progress to a wide range of employment, training, and further study opportunities. The main employment sectors for English Literature graduates include: education; arts, entertainment and recreation; retail; financial & insurance; human health and social work; information and communication; accommodation and food services; and administration and support services.

Graduates may choose to continue academic studies in English by doing an MA, with potential to move on to a PhD. Graduates who are interested in teaching English will need to take a Postgraduate Certificate in Education (PGCE), or a Professionals Graduate Diploma in Education (PGDE) in Scotland, or a qualification in teaching English as a foreign language (TEFL or CELTA).

Graduates may opt for postgraduate study that does not relate to English. Many courses will take graduates from any subject, for example, courses in subjects such as marketing, finance, business, law, librarianship, information work and journalism.

Student employability

English graduates are attractive to employers across a range of areas, for the skills that they acquire. A significant proportion also go on to further study on MA/MRes and PhD programmes.

Typical employers include: banks; publishers; advertising agencies; PR companies; accountants; local government; UK Home Civil Service; the National Health Service (NHS); retailers; finance; educational institutions; voluntary and charitable organisations; the media; libraries; leisure industries; the tourist trade; social services; as well as a wide range of local, small to medium-sized enterprises.

Links with employers

Students are encouraged to take up volunteering opportunities, and internships, offered through the Students Union and with local employers. English Literature students have the option of undertaking a work project module at level 5 and students have undertaken placements in schools, in University departments, in libraries and local independent companies. At level 4 there is an opportunity to undertake a short volunteering placement.

Please note: This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if s/he takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in the module outlines and the course handbook provided to all students at the start of the course.
