12. Educational aims of the programme

The Foundation Degree (FdA) in Integrative Counselling programme

The Foundation Degree (FdA) is a two-year modular programme at Levels 4 & 5. It is designed to qualify competent, confident and creative professional counsellors, who are well resourced for entering a variety of workplace settings. The FdA is accredited by the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (BACP) and upon completion students will become registered members achieving MBACP status. In addition, BACP Online and Phone Therapy Competencies are embedded throughout the training, to enable students to develop the necessary skills for remote working.

Philosophy

The FdA in Integrative Counselling embraces relational values as described by Mearns and Cooper's work on Relational Depth (2005) and as more recently developed in Knox, Murphy, Wiggins and Cooper (2012). These works focus our attention on the depth and the quality of relationship as the central component of therapeutic work.

The core integrative framework is Faris and van Ooijen's Relational Integrative Model (2012), which offers a framework for the integration of humanistic, psychodynamic, and cognitive-behavioural approaches, and places the relationship firmly at the heart of the integrative approach. This model falls within a pluralistic postmodern paradigm, according to which there is no 'one true reality': the above approaches are presented as different 'lenses' with which to view relational integrative therapeutic work. The focus of counselling practice largely takes place within the areas of 'overlap' shared by the three approaches, and in direct response to each client's wishes and needs.

Each FdA module has a focus on a particular theme relevant to contemporary relational counselling practice; models relevant to that theme are taught, critically evaluated, compared, integrated, and applied. The theoretical models addressed within this programme are taught in an integrative manner consistent with the philosophy described above. Psychodynamic approaches may include Transactional Analysis, Freudian concepts, and attachment theory.

Humanistic approaches may include person-centred work, 'relational depth', and transpersonal models such as Psychosynthesis. Cognitive Behavioural approaches may include brief therapy, CBT/mindfulness, and solution-focussed work. Additionally, family systems, neuroscience and existential approaches have particular relevance to a relational approach. Students will be encouraged to develop their own integrative approach based upon their learning, and upon their ability to compare the presented models and approaches.

The FdA has a practical applied focus - through placement, professional skills and work-based learning – and combines this with a deep interest in the richness of the human condition and the nature of relationship. These elements are integrated throughout the programme.

Finally, our philosophy for counselling extends to our philosophy for teaching:

"How we like to be with clients – open, available, collaborative, invitational and creative – is how we like to be in relationship with students" (Faris and van Ooijen, 2012).

Ethical Framework

The British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (2021) is at the heart of each module taught on the FdA Integrative Counselling Course. The BACP is the largest (by membership) professional organisation for Counselling and Psychotherapy in the UK. Iron Mill College considers it important that all counsellors, whether qualified or in training, adhere to an Ethical Framework and are accountable for their professional work. Membership of the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy for all students will promote a shared understanding of good practice standards. The BACP offer a wide variety of support for students who are members, including CPD, conferences, online resources, practice information sheets and placement information.

Work Based Learning and Placement

The FdA combines a practical applied focus (through placement, professional skills, and work-based learning) with a deep interest in the richness of the human condition and experience. These elements are integrated throughout the programme. 'Placement' refers to the required 100 hours of one-to-one supervised counselling practice; 'work-based learning' refers to the contextual organisational learning and experience associated with professional counselling related employment.

Work-based learning presents students with opportunities to explore and gain contextual awareness in a professional counselling setting. The experience is designed to enable students to apply their learning to the workplace and contributes towards the general learning outcomes of the course. There is no specific 'hours requirement'; as a guideline, students will undertake approximately 30- 50 hours per year. Students will be provided with a Work-Based Learning Handbook and will be supported by the Placements Co-ordinator.

Some examples of Work-based learning activities include:

- attending case management conferences
- interviewing staff
- identifying and collaborating with associated support agencies/organisations
- attending induction days/ introduction events
- data collection for audit or other research purposes

- attending staff training events which are a requirement of the workplace
- assessing policy documents
- undertaking administrative tasks/clerical duties
- attending team meetings
- reading/reviewing service literature, policies and procedures
- structured workplace training
- observation of group supervision within the workplace
- other observation, assisting and job shadowing activities
- support staff in running groups or other service user activities

The FdA aims to:

- advance understanding of integrative approaches to counselling which place the relationship at the heart of the work
- provide a rich and creative learning environment from which each counsellor can identify and develop a unique personal integrative approach
- enhance employability with a focus on professional applications and work-based learning
- focus on up-to-date theory, research, and critical thinking
- enhance counsellor self-awareness and reflective practice
- encourage and provide opportunities for the development of creative thinking and practice
- focus on ethical practice and the use of the BACP Ethical Framework (2018)
- expand awareness of difference and diversity and the implications for counsellors meet the criteria listed in the QAA Benchmark Statement for Counselling and Psychotherapy \(2022\) for undergraduate training, the BACP Online and Phone Therapy Competencies \(2021\) and BACP Gold Book \(2021\) for Accredited Training.

13. Programme Learning Outcomes

Learning, teaching and assessment

Teaching: This is a Full Time Course

Teaching is via blended learning and will be delivered through attendance at Iron Mill College (70%) and via online synchronous teaching (30%). Therefore, students are required to attend both on campus and online synchronous teaching sessions.

Synchronous learning refers to all online activities that take place during live sessions, while asynchronous learning refers to guided activities that students can access at a time to suit student's own schedules within any designated timeframe.

Students are taught through a combination of formal lectures, creative activities, experiential exercises, group process, presentations, skills practice, large and small group activities, and reflective practice. OPT (Online and Phone Therapies) competencies will be taught via online synchronous learning. There is a strong emphasis on applying theory to practice within all modules. Students will also have the opportunity to develop skills as well as graduate attributes through the Work Based Learning modules and clinical placement. In addition, meetings with Personal Academic Tutors (PATs) are scheduled on at least four occasions in the first year and three occasions in each of the other years of a course.

The University places emphasis on enabling students to develop the independent learning capabilities that will equip them for lifelong learning and future employment, as well as academic achievement. A mixture of independent study, teaching and academic support from Student Services and Library Services, as well as the Personal Academic Tutoring system enables students to reflect on progress and build up a profile of skills, achievements and experiences that will help them to flourish and be successful. This includes preparing the students regarding employability for counselling in online and telephone contexts as well as face to face.

Contact time

In-person teaching will take place one day per week and students will typically have around 7 contact hours per week of either attended or online synchronous teaching. Students will receive a teaching schedule for the academic year during the induction days. This will indicate both the attended (70%) and online synchronous teaching days (30%). There will be a focus on students developing OPT competencies within the (30%) synchronous teaching days. In addition, there will be up to 3 hours of asynchronous learning each week.

Typically, class contact time will be structured around:

- Lectures, discussions

- Skills practice
- Large and small group activities
- Reflective practice and experiential work

Independent self-study

As a full-time taught programme of study, students are expected to undertake the equivalent of 37 hours per week in total, which includes contact time, self-study, and placement activities.

- Reading of textbooks and journals
- Journal writing
- Professional Portfolio activities
- Work Based Learning. Approx. 30-50 hours per year
- Placement – a minimum of 100 hours across the two years
- Supervision of counselling practice – a minimum of 1.5 hours per month
- Personal Therapy – a minimum of 40 hours across the two years
- Preparation for assignments

Teaching staff

Students will be taught by a teaching team whose expertise and knowledge are closely matched to the content of the modules on the course. The teaching is delivered by experienced practitioners who are registered /accredited with BACP and/or UKCP. In addition, tutors are also in ongoing supervised practice as therapists. The academic team aim to create a colourful and varied learning experience, combining up to date theory and research, experiential activities, practical work and reflective opportunities. Further information on the teaching team can be found by visiting the Staff Profiles <https://www.ironmill.co.uk/college-staff>

Assessments provide opportunities to critically analyse and evaluate evidence and current practice in counselling and apply this knowledge within their own developing practice.

The team are committed to developing and enhancing students' professional competence by providing opportunities to develop skills of self-reflection, evaluation of existing evidence and critical application of that learning to new practice situations. Students will be assessed in both theoretical and practical components of the course.

Each assessment has specific marking criteria contained in the relevant module guide, which is given to students at the beginning of the module. These are based on the generic assessment criteria contained within the Generic Grade Descriptors Levels 4-7.

A grid showing assessment methods and weightings mapped to modules at each level is included in the assessment section of the programme handbook.

Submission dates are module-specific and located in the Module Guide provided at the beginning of each module.
