

CPD Framework leading to a BSc (Hons) in Applied Health Sciences Multidisciplinary Diabetes Care APPS3140

Diabetes Mellitus is a chronic, progressive condition with major implications for those affected and their families. The National Service Framework for Diabetes has set standards for high quality, consistent care provided in a variety of health care settings by health professionals who receive continuing education. This will ensure they have the skills and knowledge to diagnose and manage diabetes effectively (DOH 2001).

With the advent of the concept of integrated care, this module provides the basis for a multi-disciplinary approach to diabetes management.

This module aims to equip health care professionals working in primary or secondary care with the knowledge and clinical skills to manage the care of individuals with Diabetes Mellitus on a day-to-day basis and during acute stages of the condition.
